

“So we went to the hardware store and bought three flashlight/lanterns. They're kept next to our fire extinguishers, so they are easily located, even in the gloom. They're no real substitute for the lights but they make it possible to find what you're looking for.

A solar and battery powered calculator to total sales and figure tax, a pad of paper to record sales so they can be rung up correctly later, and a manual credit card machine and blanks (we ask for a phone number for the inevitable screw-ups) are all we need to keep CR running. Well, staff and customers help too. ;)

It's the same tool set used to run a table at a show where there is no power.”
